Extraordinary Events Taking Place in America – Simplicius

There's something rotten in Denmark.

The beltway is abuzz with some of the wildest rumors imaginable. 'Is Joe Biden even alive?' is whispered through the storied halls of the capitol.

The unelected despot-in-chief seemingly renounced his election campaign via suspicious Twitter note on a lazy Sunday afternoon, after which he hasn't been seen or heard from since. Many are now pointing out the strange idiosyncrasies surrounding the unprecedented event, including the lack of letterhead or that Biden's signature appeared to be doctored:

At first I didn't think much of this but upon further review, HOLY SH*T.

This was a legit coup today. It's not his signature. This is a blatant criminal forgery and a coup.

Why no word from Biden himself?

In the fog of the assassination attempt, the Democrats initiated a coup.

Recall that Pelosi had recently said that Biden's forced exit would be done either the easy way, or the hard way:

"Nancy made clear that they could do this the easy way or the hard way," said one Democrat familiar with private conversations who was granted anonymity to speak candidly. "She gave them three weeks of the easy way. It was about to be the hard way."

How f*cked is our country when an 84 year old woman is leading a coup against the 82 year old president for being too old?

They even released this ad as a fire warning shot against Biden:

Now there are all kinds of rumors about Biden's health, including that he may have had two 'secret' medical episodes recently, which were hidden from the public—and that's not counting the likely phony 'Covid' diagnosis.

Most shocking was the fact that even Biden's closest aides didn't learn of his announcement of withdrawal until after the fact, and from social media at that. Furthermore, everything in-house has been managed by Jeff Zients:

Biden's post to X blindsided much of the rest of the staff at both the White House and the campaign, who had gotten no indication he was reconsidering his run. Since then, Zients has managed much of the communication across an anxious administration, holding calls Sunday afternoon with both the Cabinet and senior White House staffers. Zients is scheduled to hold an all-staff White House call on Monday morning, as well as a call with appointees across the executive branch.

Some may recall he's the White House Chief of Staff who was fingered as "the second most powerful man in Washington" and secret shadow hand, by a White House insider recorded undercover by James O'Keefe's crew:

Now there are all sorts of rumors flying:

written on White House stationary. And his signature appeared to be photoshopped. Also, Biden's signature was underlined and typically he does not underline his name.

His staff only found out once the message had been posted on X. And Cabinet members were notified by the Chief of Staff — not Biden.

The last time the public saw Biden he feebly walked down the stairs of Air Force One and had to be physically assisted into the presidential limo. He has not been seen in public since.

How do we know Biden wrote that letter? And how do we know that Biden posted the letter on his X page? There wasn't even an official White House photograph of the moment.

His brother, Frank Biden, told CBS News that health "absolutely" was the deciding factor in the decision. And then he told CBS "Selfishly, I will have him back to enjoy whatever time he has left."

Is President Biden still alive? Is he awake and alert? Is he in command of his faculties? With respect, we need to see proof of life.

And it's clear there is far more going on under the hood than meets the eye. Firstly, it all ties into the Trump assassination attempt and ongoing Congressional testimony of Director of Secret Service Kimberly Cheatle. The testimony has revealed there are likely a lot of things being hidden from the public about the would-be assassin Thomas Crooks', and particularly his potential dealings with the FBI.

Tellingly, Cheatle refused to answer if Crooks was "acting alone":

Now there's an investigation by Heritage foundation showing that a digital device visiting Crooks' home multiple times has been geo-located to having gone to the vicinity of an FBI office in Washington DC in late June.

The regime is being laid bare before our eyes. What are the chances that literally only a week or two after the failed assassination of his chief rival, the "most popular president in history" (80+ million votes!) announces he won't run—and now there's even talk of an imminent resignation from the presidency. Things are off the Richter scale of uncanniness.

Speaker Mike Johnson

At this unprecedented juncture in American history, we must be clear about what just happened. The Democrat Party forced the Democrat nominee off the ballot, just over 100 days before the election.

Having invalidated the votes of more than 14 million Americans who selected Joe Biden to be the Democrat nominee for president, the self-proclaimed ‘party of democracy’ has proven exactly the opposite.

The party’s prospects are no better now with Vice President Kamala Harris, who co-owns the disastrous policy failures of the Biden Administration. As second in command and a completely inept border czar, Harris has been a gleeful accomplice — not only in the destruction of American sovereignty, security, and prosperity, but also in the largest political coverup in U.S. history. She has known for as long as anyone of his incapacity to serve.

Regardless of the chaos in the current White House, our adversaries around the globe should be reminded that the U.S. Congress, the U.S. military, and the American people are fully prepared and committed to defend our interests both at home and abroad.

If Joe Biden is not fit to run for President, he is not fit to serve as President. He must resign the office immediately. November 5 cannot arrive soon enough.

I said before: we’re in uncharted territory.

Firstly, it must be said that the ensuing circumstances after the Trump shooting were bizarre and unprecedented: neither the FBI, DOJ, nor DHS even held an official press conference about the shooting. There were no loud bipartisan calls for investigation, or uproar in general; things simply went on as before, quietly settling down before being swept under the rug. The Democrats bided their time and even gradually rolled out conspiracy theories claiming Trump had staged the shooting.

The proceedings reeked of massive coverup as the FBI continued to stonewall all inquiries, denying FOIA requests, with Secret Service head Cheatle perjuring herself in front of Congress by refusing to answer key questions, including: how many shell casings were recovered on the roof by the shooter’s body? She said she knows, but can’t say—how convenient, as it would immediately determine the presence of a second shooter, given that we have expert audio analysis of each fired shot. Alternately, it could simply point to incompetence—deliberate or not—as it would confirm the vast amount of shots the shooter was ‘allowed’ to fire off before a response.

This included the unprecedented CrowdStrike global ‘system failure’, which was clearly no ‘coincidence’. Most likely, the event was used to wipe FBI servers of complicity in the Trump hit, particularly since CrowdStrike has powerful links to the FBI—the company’s Chief Security Officer and President of Services is retired FBI Executive Assistant Director Shawn Henry:

On Friday we failed you, and for that I'm deeply sorry. I've been in my professional life for almost 40 years, and my North Star has always been to "protect good people from bad things."

For twenty four years in the FBI, I was involved in hundreds of investigations and crises...terrorist incidents, mass shootings, computer intrusions, and kidnappings. Serving the citizens, safeguarding national security, and keeping people secure is something that's defined my professional career.

When I transitioned to CrowdStrike after retiring in 2012 it was an opportunity to continue the mission. Nationstate adversaries, organized crime groups, and hacktivists were ramping up their attacks on infrastructure, posing grave risk to the commercial and private sector.

We had a vision "to protect good people from bad things", and we've been very successful for more than a decade. We've done attribution on attackers hiding in the shadows; we've disrupted ransomware attacks and high-risk intrusions at thousands of companies; and we've identified and blocked nation state adversaries seeking to exfiltrate valuable intellectual property globally.

We built a team and a culture which embodies the spirit of "one team, one fight." We created a stellar reputation over a dozen years, solving people's problems and protecting them from harm. I am as proud of my work at CrowdStrike as I was when I was at the FBI, because we've had an impact and we've made a difference.

On Friday, though, we failed. The past two days have been the most challenging 48 hours for me over 12+ years. The confidence we built in drips over the years was

Now it's been admitted that Biden's 'Counselor' Steve Ricchetti was the one that "helped the president with the tweet"—i.e. wrote the fateful election drop-out tweet for Biden.

 Jacqui Heinrich
@JacquiHeinrich

Ran into Steve Ricchetti tonight as he was getting out of an elevator. I asked, "Are you ok? Is he ok?"

"He's ok," Ricchetti said with a slight nod and a tight smile, and kept walking.

Ricchetti helped Biden write his withdrawal letter in the overnight hours according to the NYT. Biden did not notify his VP, campaign manager, or chief of staff until this morning - and the rest of his staff didn't find out until a minute before he posted the letter to social media.

Ongoing events have peeled back the veil on the inner workings of the deep state, giving us an indepth glimpse of just how little "democracy" is actually found in America. The DNC forewent any real democratic nomination process in the primaries this year, using various tricks to keep real candidates off the ballot or suppressed, as in the case of Kennedy, such as anomalously not allowing debates. This effectively took the 'democratic' process of nominating a candidate out of the public's hands and strictly into the cartel-like mechanism of the DNC, which in effect chooses the candidate themselves. This is particularly the case given that the DNC delegate system itself is an intentionally Byzantine webwork of lobbyists and corporate interests.

This is the same tried and true tactic used previously when Bernie Sanders was sabotaged out of the primaries; the fraudulent political parties merely appoint whomever they want as candidate, with assistance from the bought-and-paid-for regime media which is able to suppress any candidate in a number of ways: such as simply giving them no air time, or most notably, using arcane rules to exclude the candidate from CNN-sponsored televised debates, as in the case of Kennedy.

Also, recall how Biden was effectively couped by his donor class, which simply cut off funding, proving who has the true last say in American elections.

He didn't "give up power." Donors froze his bank accounts. It was a soft coup. One that invalidated an entire democratic primary process.

The regime tried to imprison and assassinate the leading candidate for president. When that failed, the regime launched a coup against the other candidate. The regime calls this "democracy."

Is this really what the Founding Fathers envisioned as a thriving 'Democracy'?

Of course this is an age old process, we've just never been witness to it in so unvarnished a manner. Even WaPo was forced to gag at the un-democratic nature of it all, and in a new piece today pushed for a return to a more elective rather than selective process for next month's national convention:

Yet Mr. Biden's decision creates an opportunity for a reset, not only for his party but also for U.S. politics generally, through a competitive nomination process among future national leaders. Barack Obama was a stronger candidate in 2008, and maybe even a better president, because Hillary Clinton competed so fiercely with him during a marathon primary season. Though this sort of vetting process isn't replicable, there is time for Democrats to scrutinize the top of the ticket.

The logistics of a compressed nominating contest would not be hard. France just held snap elections without a hitch. All the delegates and superdelegates are already selected and set to convene in Chicago. Democrats would not even have to schedule primaries: Debates among the top contenders would do.

The problem seems to be the elites are revolting, and AOC has claimed that behind the scenes they're not happy with Harris as the pick:

It's quite interesting, the languages she chooses. They are interested not only in 'removing the president', but 'removing the whole ticket'—irrevocable proof that what's currently happening is an ongoing coup.

But if the Democrat elites don't want Kamala, then who is it even pushing her to begin with? It's hard to say, though there's whispers that she's the in-house Clinton family pick, while the Obama family—Dons of the Chicago political mafia—are against her, evidenced by the fact that Barrack's only official message thus far prominently omitted mentioning Kamala and instead stated he looks forward to a newly chosen Democratic candidate. In short, that would make it a House Clinton vs. House Obama interneceine war.

Someone said today that this coming election will infact be the first since 1976 to not feature a dynastic Bush, Clinton, or Biden somewhere on the ticket; the only quibble is that in '76 Bush was not the final VP nominee, but was a candidate at the Republican National Convention—though he did officially run in '80.

All in all, we're witnessing extraordinary events taking place at extraordinary speeds, packaged in a veneer of 'normality' so as to keep us from lifting our snouts from the animal farm trough. Circumstances that once happened every few decades are now occurring days and weeks apart. We've had a president be shot, only to be eclipsed by the first presidential withdrawal from reelection since Lyndon B. Johnson in 1968; and the fun's not even over yet—speculation is now strong that Biden will end up outright resigning, particularly as that would give the unpopular Kamala the best chance at beating Trump, by wrapping her in a cloak of validation from having served a few months as acting president.

As of this writing, one of the most bizarre things I've seen has taken place: Kamala, landing in her Delaware campaign HQ, did a press conference from which she spoke with a disembodied 'Biden' over the phone—the same Biden who's supposed to be somewhere in Delaware himself, but has not been seen in person or public in five whole days.

Matt Walsh  @MattWalshBlog · 1h

This is the last time Joe Biden was seen. It was five days ago. Nobody knows where he is, what he's doing, if he's okay, or who is running the country at the moment.

Oddly, Kamala almost slips up and calls Biden's voice a recording, before quickly catching herself and saying phone "call". Watch for yourself:

And here's a second, longer video of Biden calling in to the HQ, offering his first 'live' words since yesterday's baffling withdrawal.

Meanwhile, regime media and its many shills and apparatchiks are already doing a cleanup job on Biden's historically disastrous presidency:

If Biden's gamble pays off, he may be one of the most successful one-term presidents

Michael McFaul

@McFaul

Follow

.@JoeBiden will go down in history as one of our greatest presidents. This last act of sacrifice for his country guarantees it.

I can only repeat, be prepared for events to continue spiraling into unexpected vectors as it's clear that even the elites are undergoing a major crisis amongst themselves, with no clear consensus on a workable path forward. Their only real option may be to target Trump again, as winning the election 'fairly' is at this point a nonstarter.

For now, all eyes are on Kamala's VP picks, the pool of which allegedly includes such marquee headliners as Gavin Newsome, Pete Buttigieg, and JB Pritzker:

A shortlist of Democrats who could be a vice presidential pick for Harris

<https://www.cnn.com/2024/07/22/politics/vp-shortlist-kamala-harris/index.html>

Things are only going to get more interesting from here. And might I mention how fitting it is that the Biden regime's late-hour collapse is so perfectly being mirrored by his Ukrainian project:

Remember, it was Soros himself who said that no man has been more committed to the Ukrainian scheme than Biden.

Of course, none of this comes as a surprise, and in fact some of our earliest predictions here from last year were that the Biden admin would try to dump Ukraine before the election if it could not generate any battlefield success for this very reason: that Ukraine's devastating defeat would pose one of the gravest threats to Biden's reelection chances, tarnishing his legacy. And what do you know, Biden's sagging popularity has tracked accordingly with Ukraine's slowly-diminishing battlefield prospects to become an inextricably fatal thorn in his hairy blond backside.

Now with fates entwined, like ancient star-crossed lovers, hand-in-hand they sink together into the grave of their own making.
